Rejection of High School Credits Earned in Middle School

I have passed a credit bearing class in middle school and have chosen to reject the credit. I understand that by choosing to reject the credit, the course and grade will not be calculated into my high school GPA and will not count toward a high school diploma. I understand that I will need to repeat the course in high school if it is required for a high school diploma and/or my postsecondary plans. The course and grade will remain on my middle school transcript. I understand that once I reject the credit, I cannot reverse my decision. I understand that credits earned as a high school student cannot be rejected under any circumstances.
